A second effect is to produce habits of rapid, inaccurate work; for those who attempt many examples in one test attempt a correspondingly large number in the other. Those who are accurate in one test are accurate in another, and those who are grossly inaccurate in one are equally inaccurate in the other. A third effect to be accounted for in some individuals is the production of a marked ability in one test at the expense of the other. For example, some children that were able to attempt 19 examples in Test 7 and had 17 right, had a score of only one or two in Test 6. and, on the other hand, some children that had a score of 12 right in Test 6...
