Simmons-Harris, by a 5-4 margin, upheld the constitutionality of a school voucher program that gave tuition assistance to poor children in failing public schools in Cleveland to enable them to attend private schools in the city, notwithstanding that most of the schools were religious in nature. At issue in the case was Ohio's Pilot Scholarship Program, which provided up to $2250 to poor students in kindergarten through the eighth grade in Cleveland for use at private schools in the city. Eighty percent of those schools were religious, and most of the voucher children (96) chose to attend these schools. The Court's reasoning appears broad enough to legitimate most school voucher programs. In several previous decisions addressing the constitutionality of programs indirectly aiding religious schools Committee for Public Education v. Nyquist, Mueller v. Allen, Witters v. Washington Department of Social Services for the Blind, and Zobrest v. Catalina Foothills Public Schools the Court had seemed to suggest that a voucher program would pass constitutional muster only...
