The establishment of geodetic control provides the required accuracy for aeronautical information, engineering surveys, and mapping to support planning, design, construction, operation, maintenance, and management of airport facilities and establishes a tie to the NSRS. The NSRS provides airports with a common, consistent set of geographical coordinates (reference points) relative to other parts of the National Airspace System. A project may include planning, reconnaissance, mark recovery, mark setting, GPS observations, spirit leveling, data processing, data analysis, data adjustment, data submittal in specified formats, and preparing reports. GPS ground surveying methods must be used for Airport Geodetic Control survey work specified in this section. 8. 2. RECONNAISSANCE. Reconnaissance activities for each survey must include, but are not limited to, the following: a. Review of station descriptions in the NGS database. b. Coordination with...
