Sometimes, indeed, the development is so slow as to aggravate shortsighted and impetuous men. They can not see why the kingdom of heaven should not instantly reveal itself through all the cloud and tumult of wasted time. They have no patience with the slowness of the centuries. The great error is that we have lost the true standards of measurement alike in time and in the quality of moral actions. The man who forces his destiny is in great peril of ending life as a suicide. We shall correct all the madness of our wild energy and clamorous impatience by remembering that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years are as one day. We have victimized ourselves by manufacturing time-keeping machines. God has a chronometer of His own. If we do not remember these things we shall make our leadership an explosion or a defiance, an atheism or a...
