II A RECENT TENDENCY IN SECONDARY EDUCATION EXAMINED The recent history of secondary school programmes, especially of high school programmes, in this country, reveals an interesting and significant tendency. Not many years ago, the secondary school programme consisted of a single course of study, or at most of two courses of study, which must be pursued, as laid down, by pupils who desired to graduate and obtain the diploma of the school. The substance of the preferred course of study was Latin, Greek, and Mathematics. The programme usually comprised also a smattering of general history, including the history of English literature, the writing of a few English essays or compositions, and occasionally political economy and mental science. This was the classical course always pursued by those pupils who were going to college; and to it most other pupils possessing, or at least claiming to possess, social and intellectual superiority also devoted themselves. These pupils thus formed the fortunate circle of the intellectual and social elite; and by means of the classical course those pupils who were not yet of this fortunate circle sought to gain admission to it. The other course was either like the classical course with the Greek left out, and French or German substituted in its place; or it was a course in which science and modern languages replaced both Latin and Greek. In the latter case, i. e. when both Latin and Greek were omitted, their places were often taken...
