That improves the economy by 5 percent. That might cost a little bit more, 20 or so per vehicle. The point is, the technology is there, it exists in the marketplace, at a very modest cost to increase the fuel efficiency, and I say get on with the job. I would also say that we do not have to have an economy exclusively dependent upon oil, no matter where the source. It is particularly abhorrent that so much of it is foreign-based. We can have alternative fuel vehicles. I am involved in a little venture right now with the U. S. Postal Service. The U. S. Postal Service is right now in the first phase of a contract to purchase 500 electric vehicles for use in areas like the Los Angeles Basin,...
