Then she hears the haunting wails of the priestesses of Isis on the island of Pharos and knows her mother died. It is the end of Cleopatras rule and the start of Selenes nightmare. Selene plots furiously to do what she knows her mother Cleopatra would want her to do--reclaim her destiny as the queen of Egypt. While plotting with her mothers agents in Rome, Selene knows her best shot at retaking Egypts throne is to beguile her despised captors nephew, Marcellus, the beautiful, golden-haired heir to Octavianus. But Selene unexpectedly falls in love with a fellow political prisoner setting off a deeply personal crisis: Does Selene choose the man she loves over the man who could help her rule Egypt Selene is determined to live up to her mothers last whispered words to her--You have the heart of a great and powerful queen, but at what price Is she doomed to live and die like her mother, trying to use sex and seduction to make strategic alliances to gain power Or can she take destiny into her own hands and create a future her mother never imagined Life in Rome has its own...
