Means for Maintaining Constant Current.--It is explained in 207 that when arc lamps are operated in series, current must be maintained constant from the power house. The first series arc lamps on the market were built for direct current, and special constant-current generators were used to operate them. Of these the ThomsonHouston, the Brush and the Wood arc-light machines have been the most popular. With the advent of the alternating-current arc lamp these machines have been gradually abandoned; regulation of alternating-current circuits being accomplished far more simply by constant-current transformers (Fig. 188). Dr. Steinmetz, in connection with his magnetite lamp (204), proposed to use mercury vapor rectifiers in connection with direct-current arc-lamp circuits. The magnetite lamp...
